1431

Amundesham's Annals of the Monastery of St. Albans BL: Harley 3775 ff 118v-119 (25 May 1431)

Et in die palmarum & die annunciationis beate marie / Incendium grande Incendium

& dampnosum in Manerio domine Iohanne Regine apud langley in domibus vtensilibus vasis argenteis et aureis in suppellectibus & per incuriam et sompnoletiam vnii histrionis & malam custodiam luminis candelo hec mala euererunt . . .

Textual note: "euenerunt": "er" at end looks as if written over an erase and the "r" not at all clear. Abbreviation mark has been added as if the word changed and had to be squeezed in before the following word ("pestilencia").

Notes: For date, see f. 116v: "Anno regni regis Henrici Sexti post Conquestum nono...." This record refers to King's Langley, where Edward III had built a royal palace, occupied at this time by the Queen Dowager, Joan of Navarre.
